THE HUMAN HEART.

Medical Authority

In the human subject the average rapidity of the cordiac pulsation of an adult male is about seventy beats per minute. These beats are more frequent as a rule in young children and in women, and there are variations within certain limits ln particular per sons owing to peculiarities of organization. It would not necessarily in abnormal sign to find in some pa ticular in lividuals the habitual fre quency of the heart's action from sixty sixty-five or from seventy-five to eighty per minute. As a rule, the leart's action is slower and more powerful in fully-developed and muscular organizations, and more rapid and feebler in those of slighter form In animals, the range is from twen--five to forty-five in the cold-bloodes and fifty upward in the warm-bloode horse, which has a very slow heartbeat, only forly strokes a minute. The misations of men and all animals differ with the sea level also. The work of a healthy human heart has been shown to equal the feat of raislng fivo tons four hundredweight 1 foot per honr, or 125 tons in twentyfair hours. The excess of this work under alcohol in varying quautilies Is often very great. A curious calculation has been made by Dr. Richardson, giving the work of the heart in mile

Presuming that the blood was thrown out of the heart at each pulsation in the proportion of sixty-nine strokes per minute, and at the assumed force of 9 feet, the nilleage of the blood through the body might be taken at 207 yards per minute, 7 miles per honr, miles per day, 61,320 miles per ear, or 5, 150, 880 miles in a lifetline ot eighty-four years. The number of beats of tho heart in the same long life would reach the grand to al of
